How One Week Can Change Your Students' Entire Year

Originally written to youth leaders.

I have always been a bit of a camp junkie. I think part of it was going back to my childhood years growing up in the late 70's and 80's when the camp backdrop was a popular go-to for movies. That along with growing up as a boy scout had me always thinking that leading at a camp with some sweet lake or rustic cabins would be awesome. Fast-forward to college when I began serving on summer camp staffs and my view of camp changed more from the amenities' to the impact of the programming and small group studies.

This is why I am a firm believer that one week of camp can change the rest of the year for your students and your ministry. I continually see God move in camp in huge ways. Earlier this fall I received two notes from youth ministers who I was with at GENERATE this past summer, from two very different backgrounds. One works with a large Latino population outside of Miami, and the other with mostly Caucasian middle-class kids in Indiana. The consistency was the work of God in the lives of their students.

"I have gone to a few camps local, out of state, etc. And never, have I ever, had such a good response not only from my youth but from my leaders, their parents, and even the church as a whole...Truly (the) mission statement of equipping and serving churches was highlighted, italicized, bold, and underlined."

- Josue, Florida

"Inspired by the week, one of our high school students started a prayer/accountability group for girls that meets on Monday evenings. The group is student-led and they have been walking through the (follow-up) devotional together. Every week, the group grows as our students' invite others from school to join them. The same student who started that group also expressed a desire at GENERATE to be mentored in sharing her faith with others. I've been meeting with her each week and praying for her and a non-Christian friend that came to her - the day after we started praying that God would open doors- and asked her what she believed about God. She is also working to start a club at her high school that will include Bible Study, but also be a mission-oriented club, planning and working community service projects in our city." - John, Indiana

I always love hearing of the impact of what one week of camp can provide. Here are five reasons I believe you should have camp as a part of your ministry strategy.

JESUS WENT ON RETREAT. SO SHOULD WE.

Jesus is always a great example to follow. As you read the scriptures, you see Him often retreating from the crowds and the “normal” flow of life. He goes away and spends intimate time with His followers or with His Father. That model still has great value. When teenagers remove themselves from the distractions of their everyday lives, they tend to hear the Lord more clearly.

Spending focused time in healthy Biblical community helps them understand the call to serve, and to make the truth of the Gospel known.

STUDENTS ARE CHANGED AT CAMP.

Some students come to Christ for the first time (seeing students going from death to life never gets old). And there are countless other decisions that come in these intimate times with God: just like the ones I shared from Florida and Indiana. Camp is about lifting up the name of Jesus, and letting the Spirit do what only He can do. Camp truly provides an opportunity for a catalytic experience with God. This is true for your group as well.

STUDENTS LEARN THE GOSPEL AND ARE CHALLENGED TO MAKE THE GOSPEL KNOWN.

These two simple truths should mark any camp you chose for your students. The Gospel should be clearly presented in a way that your students can understand. This only happens when the life and work of Jesus are lifted up as students study the Word and worship together. If the camp of your choice does not have speakers that are preaching Jesus and pointing students toward the Bible, then you need to consider other options. The Word should always be the foundation of our preaching, not an illustration. Camp allows for a high concentration of it. And secondly, camps should not simply be making consumers of the Gospel, but if we are disciple-makers, the camp experience should be creating conduits of the Gospel. It is about “getting” it and then “giving” it away. This at its core is what Christ called all of His followers to be about.

CAMP ALLOWS LEADERS DEDICATED TIME TO SPEND WITH STUDENTS.

Even if your church is highly supportive of the youth leader being out of the office and where students are, likely that time is still limited. A lunch here, a ball game there, or maybe a quick weekend event allows for some connection time with your students. But youth leaders likely often spend their days being 'administrators' of the Gospel rather than 'ministers.' This is most true when we have a bunch of events on our calendar.

Camp allows for youth leaders to have a dedicated week to step away from all the distractions that you too have as a minister. It allows for you to take the time to sit with a student over a meal at a slower pace. It allows for time on a bench talking through spiritual disciplines with a young person after they have spent a few days of concentrated time in the Word. It gives opportunities to counsel and talk with students after they have responded publicly. It allows for youth leaders days to close each evening standing in front of your students reflecting and highlighting all that God has done in them and through them. Those times don't just naturally come during the school year. They come with strategy and focus.

CAMP HAS A GREAT ROI (Return On Investment).

One of the big discussions that often comes up with camps is finances. This thought can come from multiple people, including your up-line at church that asks about the return on putting aside limited budget dollars for camp in the form of transportation needs, scholarships, covering adult chaperones' cost, and so on. Maybe parents wonder, "why does a camp cost so much?" Maybe you even find yourself evaluating what it means to be away from home for one more week, or if a camp is really worth the work. A great camp experience should not break the budget nor break you.

While you should respect the budget realities that most families, and likely your church faces, if you want to get growth you have to put out seeds. No one will find success growing if they simply water the mud. You need to be wise in where you put out seed and how much, but the seed is essential for growth. Great camp experiences just allow for a lot of seed to be scattered in the life of your students in a highly concentrated period. Growth has to be the result of the time and resources spent to have any worthwhile return. If that is not happening, then something must change. But if a camp is done well and used well, the return will be plentiful. You will see students come to know Christ, and transformed into new creations before your very eyes. Your church will feel it, your community will feel it and in time our world will feel it.

One of the great things about being a youth minister or youth worker right now, is there are countless great camps out there that will allow you to accomplish all five of these reasons to have camp as a strategic part of your annual ministry year. But the important thing is to find one that best fits your needs and strategy.

El Camino Middle School & Youth

January has passed by so fast, I can't believe its February already, and boy are there some cool things happening here in Youth Ministries!

This month I am really excited to announce some exciting changes to the way that we are doing camp scholarships this year. Rather than a bunch of smaller work projects to help our students earn scholarship money, we are going to be shifting our scholarship focus to a sponsorship model. In the upcoming months our students who are in need of scholarship funds will be putting together a student profile. These profiles include a small bio along with why our students are wanting to go to camp and what they are hoping to get out of camp. As we compile these profiles into a sponsorship booklet, and make them available to our church family, our hope is that individuals and Connect Groups in the church would come alongside our students to support them not only financially but also through prayer.

Ultimately we are wanting to make the scholarship process more personal, fostering connections between our youth and the rest of the congregation. Ideally our sponsors would get to know the students that they are sponsoring, praying for them before, during, and after camp. In addition to sponsorship, our youth will be running a coffee cart on Sunday morning in a joint effort with some of the college students. The proceeds of which will be used by both ministries.

Along with these changes to scholarships, we'll be continuing in Sunday School with our series about Science and the Bible. On Friday nights we'll continue to take a look at Paul and his life with a study in Galatians. I'm excited to see how God is continuing to work in the lives of our students and how he may be using them to minister to the greater church body!

The Three “Charms” of Church

Recently I asked you, “Why do you attend El Camino?” If a person is motivated to attend church already, there are three factors that “charm” him into picking a particular church home—the charm of the pastor, the charm of the style of music, and the charm of the church ambience. There are other factors, of course, such as the programs they offer for children and youth, but these three charms are the first we notice when we visit a church. Let’s look at each of these briefly and see how they apply to El Camino.

Statistics show that the charm of the pastor is the first and most important quality in determining which church you attend. Do you agree with his theology? This is another way of saying, “Does he interpret the Bible more or less like you do on key points of theology?” If the answer to that question is “yes,” then how does he present the Word? Is it clear? Is it relevant to my life? Does it inspire worship and spiritual growth? Finally, is the pastor interested in the people of his flock or is he arrogant and smug in his interactions with his congregation?

The second charm that we notice immediately upon visiting a new church is the musical style. And, as with all the arts, there is no right or wrong, but only matters of personal taste. What tastes good to you may be sour to someone else, however. And, as with the pastor’s persona, the music must be presented by someone who can represent that style of music well, and who can himself be readily accepted by the congregation in that role. The person must blend well with the style of music he is presenting and the style he is “serving” should not be a force fit for him. In short, he should be a part of the culture he is representing.

The third charm is the ambience of the church and church body. All churches have a certain feel to them. Some just look so “churchy.” We have all been driving cross country and seen a church in the distance that just looks like a church and that it just belongs there. Some are old, some are new, but they just fit their space, and they are inviting from any distance. There are churches that you enter, and they embrace you with a warmth that makes you feel as if you are putting on a warm, soft robe. It just fits your personality—an open feeling of unhurried acceptance as you enter, and you immediately feel that you could settle in there.

How does El Camino become a warm robe of comfort to a hurting world? How do we rub shoulders with the unchurched and de-churched and leave them with the feeling that we have more of life than they presently have—that we have charms that are worth seeking and nurturing? How do we show the charm of Christ’s message of peace, and salvation, and love in their lives, and how can they experience these charms too?

#1 Florian's Gate

#2 The Amber Room

#3 Winter Palace

The Iron Curtain has been torn open, setting Poland on the road to democracy.

In Florian's Gate Jeffrey Sinclair begins working in a London antique shop where he discovers that Alexander Kantor, his enigmatic relative and employer, has a reputation for acquiring priceless antiques under mysterious circumstances. Jeffrey's new life takes him to places he had never imagined, to the secret treasure troves of Europe, to poverty-stricken men and women also haunted by the past and hoarding their few valuables. But the journey takes him inward as well, into his own pain, into a place where only his heavenly Father can bring hope and light.

In The Amber Room, secret East German papers lead Alexander Kantor and his assistant, Jeffrey Sinclair, to clues concerning the whereabouts of the Amber Room. Considered by some to be the "eighth wonder of the world," the Amber Room, a legendary room, with precious eighteenth-century amber panels that graced a tsarist palace in St. Petersburg, was stolen by Nazi invaders during WWII. Official statements announced the panels were destroyed in the ravages of fire during the war. But were they?

In Winter Palace, Jeffrey Sinclair has earned his stripes in the international antiques market and has come to a new understanding of faith. But then a seemingly straightforward assignment--reclaim the winter palace of a Russian nobleman whose family lost everything during the 1917 Russian Revolution--turns into something much more sinister.

"Fresh Starts"

A SISTERHOOD OF WOMEN HELPING OTHER
WOMEN WHO HAVE LOST THEIR SPOUSE

Our Purpose:

When a woman has experienced the loss of her spouse she finds that her life has to be redefined. Recovering from the losses of life is a challenge at any age, but starting over makes the challenge even greater. "Honor widows who are widows indeed." (1 Timothy 5:3)

As widows, we do not have the opportunities to go out to nice places as we did as a couple. Now we will begin to meet once a month for lunch and fellowship. Fresh Starts is not a support group, it is for the purpose of fellowship with women who have gone through the death of their husband.

Definition of a widow:

A woman (wife) who is living with a man (husband), who has died while living together. Not a divorcee whose husband had died.

Our regular meetings are on the 3rd Wednesday of the month, normally at noon in C-1. Please call our coordinator Barbara Lunsford with any questions you might have at 520.909.2887.

Blessings and Welcome!!

Pastor Tom will be leading a tour to the Holy Lands (Israel and Jordan) in October 2019. An introductory meeting will be held on Sunday, February 17, 2019 at 4:00pm in West #9, to give some basic information about the tour. This introductory meeting will be followed by several classes covering (1) the Geography, People and Culture of the Holy Land; (2) the History of the Holy Land (the Biblical history of the Holy Land, the history of the Holy Land from A.D. 100 to 1900, and the history of the Holy Land from 1900 to the present); (3) the Religions of the Holy Land; (4) Jordan and Petra; and (5) the Holy City of Jerusalem. Everyone is welcome to attend the classes whether you are interested in the tour or not. There will be approximately 8 classes, every other week. If you plan to attend the tour, there will be a few additional classes. Dear El Camino Congregation,

We want to say thank you for your November food drive donations that you collected for our 'God's Bounty' Christmas boxes! Your donation amounted to 124 lbs of food, and a $20 cash donation. With your help we were able to give out 100 well-stocked Christmas food boxes to families on the east side who really needed the help.

Your participation through these donations helps us keep our shelves stocked so we can continue to give food to over 225 families per week! We couldn't do it without community support like yours; it means everything to us, so thank you so much!

Short Term Missions

Nate Schafer, a member of El Camino Baptist Church, has been serving in a Short Term Missions Support Role since 2008. Nate takes a month long Short Term Missions trip overseas, primarily using his IT skills from his secular job to help missionaries with computer issues. He does this as a member of Wycliffe associates. With them, he has been to Chang Mai (Thailand) twice, N'Djamena (Chad), and the Solomon Islands (South Pacific). The Solomon Islands in the South Pacific are now his "regular" destination. He has been there eight times. Nate has helped Wycliffe set up a core network infrastructure at their main campus in Honiara, on the island of Guadalcanal. In addition, he repairs computers and laptops (replacing keyboards, memory, HDDs, screens, etc.), restores lost data, and cleans up viruses.

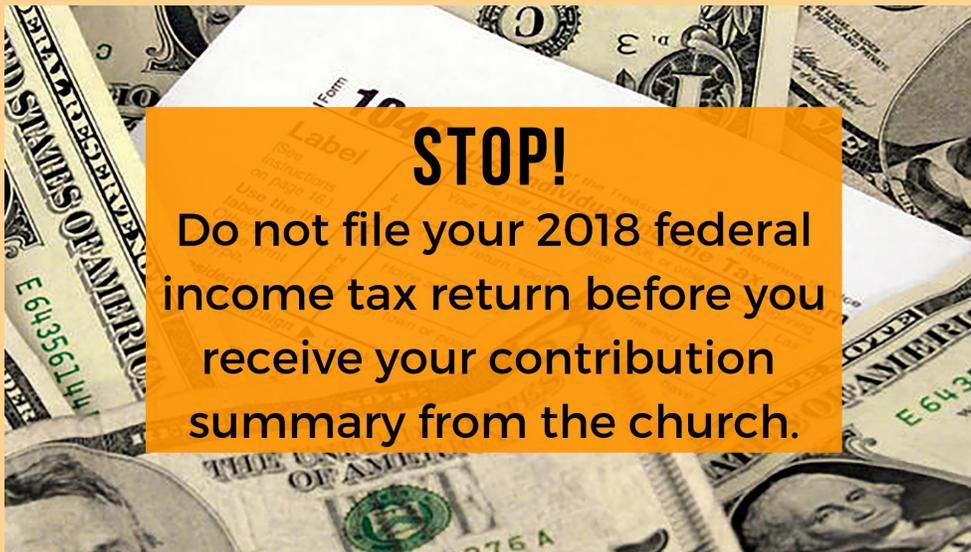

This computer support work helps the Bible translators and the entire Wycliffe organization. He also supports Wycliffe remotely throughout the year, keeping their network up-to-date, downloading software repositories, off-line Windows updates and anti-virus definitions, and keeping track of their local backup computer.

Don Gibbens, President of El Camino Missionary Fellowship, is really excited to have Nate Schafer sharing on Monday, February 4th at 10:30 am. Don said, "God has given all of us talents and abilities that are sharable in fulfilling the Great Commission. We might not be able to be 'on the field' full time, but we can share what God has given us. Learning where we can serve, at any age, is part of the mission of El Camino Missionary Fellowship."

Join us Monday, February 4th, at 10:30 am. You can also share in the Potluck and "Meet and Greet" to be held at 11:30 am after Nate's Presentation.
